

Interdisciplinary Symposium

Music without Walls? Source Studies in the 21st Century

School of Music and Sonic Arts, Queen's University Belfast

16-17 December 2009

CALL FOR PAPERS

The symposium 'Music without Walls?' is being held to coincide with the twentieth anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall and to celebrate subsequent developments in music source studies. The aims of this interdisciplinary symposium are to present and contextualize recent findings and to discuss how new technologies may facilitate and enhance our understanding of these issues.

Proposals exploring any aspect of this theme are invited, although those relating to new discoveries, archival research in former 'Eastern-Bloc' countries, case studies of various geographical locales, the implications of technological developments and future directions in source studies, are particularly encouraged.

The symposium will open with a research seminar given by Dr Michael Maul (Bach-Archiv, Leipzig) Wednesday 16 December 2009, 1 pm.

Individuals may submit one proposal in the form of an abstract of not more than 300 words (individual papers), or not more than 400 words (round table sessions).

The abstract should be preceded by information under the following headings:
NAME, INSTITUTION, POSTAL ADDRESS, EMAIL ADDRESS.

Abstracts may be emailed to Alison Dunlop adunlop04@qub.ac.uk
Attachments (in MS word file or .rtf format) are preferred for the text of abstracts, but all attachments should be backed up with a plain-text version in the main email.

Deadline for receipt of abstracts is 1 September 2009.

Alison Dunlop
School of Music and Sonic Arts (Music Building)
University Road
Belfast
Northern Ireland
BT7 1NN
Tel : +44 (0)28 9097 5337 (School Office)