

INSTITUTE OF Irish Studies

Queen's University
Belfast

Irish Studies Seminars – Spring 2017

The 2016-17 Irish Studies Seminars showcase research from across the university. Seminars are at 4.30 on Mondays, in the Irish Studies Seminar Room, 8 Fitzwilliam Street. All welcome.

- 6 February Cahal McLaughlin (Creative Arts) 'The Prisons Memory Archive: ethics and aesthetics – a case study in addressing the legacy of the past'
- 13 February Aglaia De Angeli (History) 'A republic for China and Ireland: a new beginning, 1911-22'
- 20 February Marilynn Richtarik (English, Georgia State University/QUB) 'Forging a usable past: Brian Friel's Making History'
- 27 February Tony Gallagher (Education) 'Shared education and school collaboration in Northern Ireland'
- 6 March Lucy McDiarmid (English, Montclair State University) 'The dreamer on the train in contemporary Irish poetry'
- 13 March James Greer and Graham Walker (Politics) 'Christian Socialism in Belfast and Lanarkshire: the 1924 general election'
- 20 March Peter McLoughlin (Politics) 'Before hope and history rhymed: Irish-America and the political foundations for Clinton's Northern Ireland peace initiative'
- 27 March Sean Connolly (History) 'Do we need to think again about the Irish diaspora?'
- 3 April Brice Dickson (Law) 'Ireland's Supreme Court: an assessment of its achievements'
- 2 May [Tues] Finbar McCormick (Archaeology) 'From Meeting House to Chapel: The evolution of Presbyterian and Catholic churches'
- 8 May David Heffernan (History) 'The early history of the Ulster Plantation, c.1609-1641: Some problems and opportunities'
- 15 May Sarah McCleave and Triona O'Hanlon (Music) 'ERIN explored: resources from the Horizon 2020 project "Thomas Moore in Europe"'

Institute of Irish Studies, QUB, 6-8 Fitzwilliam St, Belfast
Email irish.studies@qub.ac.uk
<https://www.qub.ac.uk/schools/IrishStudiesGateway/>