

Training for Part-Time Tutors, Teaching Assistants and Demonstrators

The training of part-time teachers, including postgraduate students acting as tutors or laboratory demonstrators and outside professionals contributing to teaching, is required by the University for Quality Assurance and Enhancement purposes. The Centre for Educational Development provides customised workshops on teaching skills for part-time colleagues. We work closely with academic staff in an area to plan the workshops, and act as facilitator/co-facilitator where appropriate. Some of the workshops are full- or half-day events, but in other areas we have offered a more extensive programme, for example, five mornings.

As well as bespoke programmes there are also some general workshops offered routinely, for example, on small group teaching and laboratory demonstrating, which part-time teaching staff are encouraged to attend.
