MS 17 Somerville & Ross Manuscripts

About the Collection:
This is a significant collection of personal and literary papers of Edith Somerville (1858-1949) and Violet Martin (1862-1915) alias “Somerville and Ross,” one of Ireland's most celebrated literary partnerships. An important and unique collection reflecting the lives, interests and work of the two authors, the Somerville & Ross Manuscripts consist largely of diaries, correspondence, working papers, and draft manuscripts relating to the authors' literary activities, personal interests and affairs. Of the literary papers can be found annotated, handwritten notes and manuscripts relating to numerous publications produced under the Somerville & Ross name, including that of The Further Experiences of an Irish RM (1908), one of their best known works.

Other papers concern the unfinished novel, A Man of the People (c 1897-99) and drafts of Some Irish Yesterdays (1906), Mount Music (1919), The Big House of Inver (1925) and, Somerville’s last book, Maria and Some Other Dogs (published 1949). Working notes are also featured and these include an indexed notebook of Irish anecdotes and dialogue compiled by the two writers, c.1886-1945, and various notes on Irish political and cultural affairs, the suffragette movement and Irish agriculture, c. 1910-32.

Most notable amongst the personal papers are the extant diaries of both Somerville and Martin and comprehensive series of correspondence from the two writers with friends, relatives and other associates. Of particular significance are the letters between Martin and Lady Augusta Gregory, co-founder of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, c. 1889-1915, and with the artist, William Gorman Wills, c. 1885-1890; and Somerville with her brother, Colonel John Somerville, c. 1889-1948, and the English composer and feminist, Dame Ethel Smyth, c. 1918-44.

Other interesting items include three notebooks detailing spiritualist séances attended by Somerville, 1930-41, with messages apparently received from Violet Martin and other dead relatives and a number of original illustrations and drawings by Somerville, who in addition to her literary activities, enjoyed a good degree of artistic success during her lifetime.

By her will Violet Martin (“Martin Ross”) bequeathed all her papers including the copyright, to her cousin Edith Somerville. Violet Martin’s papers, together with those of Edith Somerville passed into the ownership of Sir Patrick Coghill, nephew of Edith Somerville. Sir Patrick Coghill auctioned the entire collection in 1968, allowing Queen’s to purchase a significant proportion of the material. The remaining parts of the Coghill collection were largely purchased by Trinity College, Dublin, and the New York Public Library.

A recently added (2017) treasure to the collection is the manuscript for an unpublished and hitherto unrecorded children’s book, Growly-Wowly, or The Story of the Three Little Pigs. A version of the tale that had first appeared in 1849. Both the rhyming text and illustrations are by Edith Somerville.

Digital Special Collections and Archives provides online access (pending permission) to a number of letters between Edith Somerville and Ethel Smyth.

MS 17/802  Manuscript: Growly-Wowly or The Three Little Pigs

The original manuscript of an unpublished and previously unrecorded book for children titled GROWLY-WOWLY. Or, The Story of the Three Little Pigs.

The story is entirely in verse in Somerville's hand and contains seven superb full page watercolour illustrations by Somerville (including the title page). Circa 8 x 9 inches. Preserved in modern binders folder. The title page is lightly soiled but the other pages are clean and fresh. Signed on nearby Somerville, with addresses in Cork and Kensington. The Kensington address suggests it was created around 1880.

It is not clear why it was not published, or indeed if she sought publication; it may have been intended for her sister's children.

MS 17/874  Diaries: Edith Somerville and Violet Martin

The complete extant diaries of Edith Somerville and Violet Martin.

Edith Somerville's diaries begin when she was sixteen and end in her ninety-first year. Those of Violet Martin cover her life from her fourteenth year until a few weeks before her death. The diaries have been used and some extracts quoted by Maurice Collis in his Somerville and Ross (1968). They are also referred to by Edith Somerville in her autobiographical Irish Memories (1917). With these exceptions the diaries are believed to be unpublished.

MS 17/874/1  Diaries of Edith Somerville

1873-1948  The diaries of Edith Somerville covering the years 1873-1948 with the omission only of part of 1875 and all 1876, 76 vol., c. 13,100 pp., mainly in ink, some pages in pencil, octavo and small octavo, closely written in commercial diaries for each year, original cloth (a few in boards), with Edith Somerville's signature or initials in most of the volumes.

Edith Somerville's diary for 1915 is in two volumes, the second of which is devoted to a long account of Violet Martin's last illness. A photographic reproduction of Edith's sketch of her as she lay dying is stuck to the inside of the front cover, together with an inscription in Edith Somerville's hand.

MS 17/874/2  Diaries of Violet Martin

1875-1915  The diaries of Violet Martin covering the years 1875-1915 with the omission only of parts of 1875-6, all 1876, 1877 and all 1881, 37 vol., c. 3,750 pp., small octavo (one octavo and one duodecimo), closely written in commercial diaries for each year, original cloth (two in limp wrappers). Violet's diaries for 1878 and 1879 in a single volume. Violet Martin's signature on all but one of the fly leaves, with a few pen drawings in the diaries of both writers.

MS 17/874/3  Notes on Violet Martin's diaries by Muriel Curry.

Black file, typescript, 95 pp.

MS 17/874/4  Notes on Edith Somerville's diaries by Muriel Curry

08/04/1965  (niece of Violet Martin and cousin of Edith Somerville)

Correspondence: William Gorman Wills (1828-91) to Violet Martin

Series of 45 autograph letters signed from William Gorman Wills (1828-91) to Violet Martin, c. 84 pp, octavo, Garrick Club, Ailsa Villa, St. Margaret's [Twickenham], etc.

Undated, with five original envelopes postmarked 1885-90: very affectionate letters ("My dearest child", "My dearest young pal", etc.), asking for her attention and sympathy, frequently referring to meetings in Kew Gardens and pressing her to meet him ("Don’t get married for a few months till we’ve had a few larks together") suggesting that she should visit him in his studio in Kensington, sending her money, discussing his painting, his poetry and his work for the theatre (references to Irving, Ellen Terry and others), asking to discuss his plots and to read his poetry to her, informing her that he has torn up her letters, congratulating her on the success of a novel dealing with Ireland and claiming that he had nursed her literary talent, etc. The letters mostly written in ink, a few in pencil, and one letter endorsed with a menu of 10 courses in the hand of Violet Martin.

... I am sincerely delighted and proud of you, because it was I who reared you. Loftus has been here talking of your novel ... I spoke & claimed the praise for myself - I formed her, I said, I developed her nascent qualities; in fact I am the author of that book . . .

 William Wills was born at Kilmurry and educated at Dublin. He worked in London from 1862 as a painter and later as a dramatist. His many plays included "Eugene Aram" and "Charles F", in which Irving played, and "Olivia", in which Ellen Terry acted with great success. His life was exceptionally Bohemian. Violet Martin's relationship with Wills has been described as the "tiny romance" in her life (Maurice Collis, Somerville and Ross, 1968, pp. 24, 94). He was a distant cousin, and a friend of her brother Robert. In 1885, the approximate date of the beginning of this correspondence, he was 57 and Violet Martin 24. A letter in the present collection appears to show that when in London she helped him in his literary affairs.
Correspondence: Edith Somerville to Colonel John Somerville

Series of c. 1033 autograph letters signed from Edith Somerville to her brother Colonel John Somerville ("My dearest Jack").

C. 4,150 pp., mostly quarto, some octavo, folio, etc., Drishane House and Tally Ho, Castle Townshend, County Cork, Lismore Castle, Hotel Germain, Aix-les-Bains, etc., 1 March 1889-18 December 1948.

Some letters signed "Dee", mostly in ink, a few in pencil, a few illustrated with pen drawings, about three-quarters of the letters neatly numbered in chronological sequence, together with 2 letters to her brother Boyle Somerville (later Vice-Admiral) and a few imperfect letters (some signed)

(1 February 1899, referring to the first "Irish R.M." stories for the Badminton Magazine)... I have been too busy at these accursed Bad. Mag. things to write before, & am now "wraughting" in the final agony of the March No. I fear your little soldier friends have very weak literary digestions . . .

(4 October 1899) She [Violet Martin] & I are rather fed up with orders of articles "in the style of your delightful R.M." ones, & feel that at our age & in our enfeebled state of health we can hardly compete with all this editorial enthusiasm. I suppose we must try somehow . . .

(1 February 1916, on the death of Violet Martin ["Martin Ross"]... There isn't much to say. Just that a life, that has always been a very happy one, has fallen in ruins. It is ungrateful to say I have no future left, ... but the innermost part, "my share of the world", has gone with Martin, & nothing can ever make that better. No one but ourselves can ever know what we were to each other...

 This exceptionally extensive series of letters covers a period of 60 years, beginning when Somerville was 30 and ending when she was 90. The last letter, in the feeble hand of extreme age, was written within a year of her death.

The letters describe every aspect of her personal and family life and include many references to her literary work and friends. They also provide a detailed account of the remarkable Anglo-Irish families of Somerville and Coghill: Edith's sister Hildegarde was married to Sir Egerton Coghill; and both families lived at Castle Townshend. The letters are, moreover, an important historical record of life in County Cork between 1889 and 1948, written by a gifted author who was a sharp observer of the Irish scene and was active in Irish life in many ways.
The complete extant correspondence between Edith Somerville and Ethel Smyth.

Correspondence from Edith Somerville to Ethel Smyth
3/01/1921-3/02/1930 c. 297 autograph letters signed (nine imperfect) from Edith Somerville to Ethel Smyth, c. 1,047 pp., quarto and a few octavo, Drishane, Castle Townshend, Lismore Castle, County Waterford, Kenmare House, Killarney, and other addresses in Dublin, England, USA and Spain, a few undated, one leaf torn slightly affecting text, a few leaves slightly frayed.

Correspondence from Ethel Smyth to Edith Somerville

These are intimate letters showing the development and nature of their emotional friendship and their generous sentiments and conduct towards each other, referring to Edith Somerville’s relationship with her dead friend Violet Martin and to the spiritualist communications between them, discussing many other personal matters (Ethel Smyth's dead lover Harry Brewster, her treatment for deafness, her views on Edith Somerville’s personality and outlook, their tour in Sicily in 1920, etc.), referring to their activities in general (Edith Somerville’s visit to the USA, etc.) and to their literary and musical work in particular, and to many personalities in England, Ireland and other countries, describing Ethel Smyth's many efforts to help Edith (organisation of exhibition of her painting in London, introductions, etc.), the troubles of 1922 in Ireland, etc., almost all the Somerville letters signed “Your loving Edith” and many of the Smyth letters “Your loving Ethel”, the letters neatly inscribed with numbers in chronological sequence, together with two letters of Christopher St. John to Edith Somerville, 7 pages, octavo, 7-27 July 1944, about the return to Edith Somerville of her letters written to Ethel Smyth.

 This collection is of exceptional interest in several respects. It is of unusual completeness, containing a substantial portion of both sides of a correspondence carried on with great frequency. (For one period the collection contains letters of Ethel Smyth written daily and sometimes twice a day). The writers were intimate friends, highly intelligent and with lively, dominating characters although there is a contrast between the matriarchal existence of Edith Somerville in Ireland and the London life of Ethel Smyth. The one was the well-known co-author of Some Experiences of an Irish R.M. and author of other favourite works concerned with Ireland. The other was a distinguished composer and a prominent figure in the English musical, literary and social scene. The letters thus contain much information both on the literary and musical activities of the writers and on persons known to them in Ireland or England in the early part of the 20th century. (The letters are particularly numerous for the early 1920s).

Edith Somerville and Ethel Smyth first met in Ireland in September 1919, and had begun a correspondence in the previous year. The friendship developed very rapidly and was broken only by the death of Ethel Smyth in 1944.

MS 17/880 Unpublished Manuscript: A Man of the People

Autograph manuscript in the hand of Edith Somerville of an unpublished novel by Somerville and Ross, entitled A Man of the People.

A fair copy with all pages numbered by the writer, with a very few contemporary autograph corrections and revisions, two-thirds of the last page missing (text affected), a few other pages somewhat torn or frayed (text not affected), together with a related envelope addressed to Edith Somerville with a note in her hand: "Unfinished M.S. ‘A man of the People’” c 75 pages, folio.

 The title-page reads: “A Man of the People / By /E. OE. Somerville & Martin Ross. / Authors of The Real Charlotte, An Irish Cousin, The Silver Fox, etc.” This indicates that the manuscript was written between 1897 (when the last-named book was published) and 1899 (first publication of Some Experiences of an Irish R.M.). The manuscript, which bears a pencilled note about copies to be typed, was evidently considered by the authors to be in a finished state, although the novel was not complete (and was never completed).

A note in the hand of Edith Somerville, on p. 1 of the manuscript reads "used in Christian”. This is presumably a reference to Mount Music, published as by Somerville and Ross in 1919, in which the heroine’s name is Christian. No large use, however, of the present manuscript appears to have been made in Mount Music (cf. the preface to this book).

Apart from the few corrections and revisions to the manuscript which are evidently contemporary, a number of passages have been crossed through in coloured pencil, probably by Edith Somerville at a much later date.
MS 17/881 Commonplace Books

Four autograph commonplace books recording characteristic Irish anecdotes and dialogue, 1886-1945, collected by the authors for use in their works, c. 620 pp., in the hands of both authors, in a ledger and three notebooks, with some other memoranda and notes.

MS 17/881/1 Brown hardback notebook.
1886 – [?]
The opening pages of the ledger begun in 1886 are inscribed “Irish memories … Collected & compiled by E. OE. Somerville and Martin Ross”. This is followed by a list in Edith's hand of their books published in 1889-1941, showing that she regarded the ledger as a fundamental work. The contents of this ledger are indicated by an index which has the following headings: "Hunting &c Foxes-Dogs, Cats &c – Letters & Biographies – Trains – Beggars & c – Domestic – Medical - Abuse. Exclamations - Blessing & Commendation - Cookery & food &c - Matrimonial &c Courting &c - Social. Religious - Names & Nick-names - Agricultural (various) & the Weather - Fishing, boating, shooting - Drink & fighting - Unclassified &c &c &c -The Supernatural - Phrases (mostly obsolete)."

A typical entry reads: "Of a Tailor. He often thried to go to Ameriky, but he's never able to leave Ballincolly, for he gets too drunk when he's saying good-bye to his friends" A note indicates that this was used in Further Experiences of an Irish R.M.

MS 17/881/2 Brown hardback notebook.
Marbled boards (front board missing). Unpaginated, c 200 pp. quarto.
Somerville and Ross began to collect examples of Irish talk at least as early as January 1886 (the date on the earliest of these notebooks). A number of the anecdotes recorded are dated, and it can be seen that Edith continued the collection long after Violet's death in 1915. The anecdotes were collected for literary purposes; and the titles of the relevant books have been added by Edith Somerville against a number of anecdotes which were used.
Includes an autograph manuscript, with revisions, of a story by Martin Ross entitled "The story of owld Bocock's mare", 8 pages, signed by the author in May 1893.

MS 17/881/3 Blue notebook.

MS 17/881/4 Green hardback notebook.
4/12/1899 Cover reads; “E.S. & V.F.M. 1937”. Dated inside back cover, “December 4 '99” with Violet's name and an address in Paris. In the hands of both authors. Quarto.
Letters from the Commonplace books.

7 letters: 6 to Edith Somerville, 1 to Ethel Smyth (4 include envelopes), folio and small quarto.

2. 14/10/1937 Ruth Duffin, Belfast, containing some newspaper clippings with examples of “racy Irish speech” 2 pp.

3. Envelope containing 3 letters from Lord Dorchester. The envelope was opened and re-sealed by Censor.
   26/07/1944 Basingstoke. Discusses hunting, breeding horses, and a postscript explaining why his first letter was returned by the Censor. 2 pp.

4. 31/10/1944 Lord Dorchester, Basingstoke. Envelope opened and re-sealed by the Censor. 1 p.

6. 15/03/1924 Draft of a letter to Ethel Smyth, under the guise of Adrian Boult, Conductor of Smyth’s Mass in D which had recently been revived and conducted by Boult on 7 February, and, following its success again on 8 March. The letter is a witty and scathing account of how the “Boult” has fled to Mass, USA rather than face another performance. 2 pp., quarto.

7. 21/06/1944 Hilda Lockett-Forde. 4 pp., octavo.

Autograph drafts for The Further Experiences of an Irish R.M., Some Irish Yesterdays, and Stray-aways, with extensive revisions, some showing the authors’ collaboration.

Some pages written in the hands of both Somerville and Ross and containing notes in which one advises the other, some pages frayed or torn, in a folder inscribed by Edith Somerville "Scraps of 'Further Experiences' " 16 pp. Folio.

These drafts provide important evidence for the nature of the collaboration of Somerville and Ross. One draft contains revisions in Martin's hand to a text in the hand of Edith. There are also revealing notes written by one to the other, such as: "To Martin: I have refrained from details as to the flour bin". One of Martin's notes reads: "This is all too tight & subtle"; and another begins: "I think the Captain Morgan story should certainly go in. The minor pets ought I think to go out, except the Tortoise ..."
MS 17/884  Autograph Manuscripts

Autograph manuscripts, mainly in the hand of Violet Martin, written in three notebooks, c. 260 pp.
A few pages in the hand of Edith Somerville, Violet Martin's signature or initials on fly-leaf or cover of each notebook.

MS 17/884/1  Manuscript with some deletions and revisions of Slide Number 42.
1888, 1889  [originally published in The Lady's Pictorial in 1890 and expanded into Naboth's Vineyard by Somerville and Ross, 1891], signed at the end with the initials of both and the date "August 1889", two other stories entitled A Delegate of the National League (dated 25 October 1888) and Cheops in Connemara (signed "V.M.", 13 June 1889), some heavily revised drafts, some exercises in Irish and a few pen sketches, c. 120 pp. in all, folio.

MS 17/884/2  Drafts with extensive deletions and revisions for Some Irish Yesterdays.
Note of contents on fly-leaf added by Edith Somerville in old age, c. 100 pp. in all, small quarto.

MS 17/884/3  Manuscript draft of "In sickness and in health".
Published in Some Irish Yesterdays. Holograph draft in the hand of Violet Martin, with many revisions and a drawing. 12 pp.

MS 17/887  Autograph Manuscript: Choral

Autograph manuscript of Choral, or the Sleeping Beauty, a Fairy Extravaganza in Three Acts, by Two Flappers, produced by her at Castletownshend in 1916, 48 pp., small quarto.

Written in an exercise book, two sketches of the arrangement of scenery, note on title "Revised & brought up to date by E. OE. Somerville", together with a printed playbill and a notice of the two performances in 1916, and two humorous playbills (loosely inserted) for a performance of 1877 (one autograph, one privately printed by "Coghill & Co. Printers"

The playbills show that the actors were members of the Somerville and Coghill families both in 1877 and in 1916 (when the youthful Nevill Coghill, later professor at Oxford, played a nurse from County Cork).

MS 17/888  Notebook for Mount Music

Notebook containing notes on the plot and early drafts for Mount Music together with some political and personal notes.
The notebook, dated 4 March 1918, with Edith Somerville's signature, cloth-covered boards with autograph inscription Mount Music.

Mount Music, a novel, was first published by Edith Somerville in 1919 as by Somerville and Ross. The present manuscript appears to contain Edith Somerville's earliest ideas and work on the book.
MS 17/890  Autograph drafts: Flurry’s wedding

A series of 18 autograph drafts, with extensive revisions.

MS 17/891  Autograph drafts: Philippa's Fox-hunt and The House of Fahy

Autograph manuscripts of versions, as adapted for broadcasting in 1927-8, of Philippa’s Fox-hunt and The House of Fahy (both from Some Experiences of an Irish R.M.)

 These two notebooks were evidently used by Edith Somerville while broadcasting: words and phrases are underlined in coloured pencil, no doubt to facilitate reading; and one manuscript begins with the announcer’s remarks introducing Edith Somerville.

MS 17/891/1  Autograph draft of Philippa’s Fox Hunt.
Also contains autograph manuscripts of “Impressions”, 13 pp., written in the U.S.A. and later used in The States through Irish Eyes, an address to the Colony Club, New York, one page, introducing her own reading of Philippa's Fox-hunt, and a draft letter to Time and tide in protest at a review of Elizabeth Bowen’s The last September.

MS 17/891/2  Autograph draft of The House of Fahy.

MS 17/892  Autograph Manuscripts: The Smile and the Tear, “In Praise of Ladies”
Both manuscripts have extensive revisions.

MS 17/892/1  9/1932-28/04/1933  Draft of four chapters of The Smile and the Tear (published in 1933 as by Somerville and Ross), c. 60 pp.

MS 17/892/2  Draft of an essay entitled “In praise of Ladies”, 22 pp., with two pen sketches of dogs, both manuscripts written in an exercise book, small quarto.

MS 17/893  Autograph Manuscript: Little Red Riding Hood in Kerry

Autograph manuscript of Little Red Riding Hood in Kerry, with extensive revisions, c. 22 pp., quarto. Written in an exercise book, dated 9 July 1934, together with some autograph drafts and memoranda, c. 13 pages

Correspondence: Lady Gregory

Series of 6 autograph letters signed from Lady Augusta Gregory (1852-1932), playwright and poet, founder with W.B. Yeats of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, to Violet Martin, Coole Park, Gort, County Galway, and The Little Theatre, John Street, Adelphi. Also 1 autograph letter signed from Sir William Gregory to V.M's mother.

 Sir Hugh Lane, born in County Cork in 1873, became a very successful art dealer in London and was drowned when the "Lusitania" was torpedoed off the Irish coast in May 1915. By his will he had bequeathed a group of Impressionist pictures to the National Gallery in London, but an unsigned codicil revoked this and bequeathed them to the City of Dublin. A long controversy over the pictures ensued until a compromise, subject to review in 1979, was announced in the Dáil and the House of Commons in 1959. The letter of 8 July 1915 is apparently the earliest evidence of Lady Gregory's view that the pictures ought to pass into Irish ownership.

MS 17/920/1 26/10/1889 Autograph letter signed from Sir William Gregory, 4 pp., octavo, Coole Park, to Violet Martin's mother, praising "Violet's novel" [probably An Irish Cousin] for its humour, observation of nature, characterisation and true handling of Irish dialogue, with some criticism and a forecast of fame to come.

MS 17/920/2 24/03/[1892] Thanking V.M. for her letter of sympathy after the loss of her husband. "I have had more happiness and more of the world's best gifts in the last 12 years than falls to the lot of most women, so I have lost more than most women now..."

MS 17/920/3 22/01/[1906] "The fact is, all this Dublin time I wrote up hits into plays - me or somebody else - or typed ... or did sums - & tried to manage a business that has grown too big for [a, omitted] private manager. Our theatre has a good many earners dependent on it ... and we must keep it going - Also, we must get a business man to do the work that we 3, Yeats Synge & myself are struggling with ...".

MS 17/920/4 [1914] Appreciation of certain of The Irish R.M. (read with "much profit and amusement" as a distraction from depression caused by the "massacre" of the war) and The Real Charlotte ("... far beyond any writer now going with the one exception of Hardy ... I don't know anything like it."), urging Violet Martin to reap "a fine harvest" by writing about Dublin life, and sending many details of her own life (dramatic work, various difficulties of her theatre, antics of Violet Martin's god-daughter.

MS 17/920/5 14/05/1915 Describing her grief at the death of her nephew, Sir Hugh Lane, and deploring it as a loss for Ireland (". . . we had these dozen years worked so hard for the imaginative awakening of Ireland"), quoting a friend's account of Lane's last minutes on the deck of the "Lusitania" The Little Theatre, 1 p., quarto.
“My dear Violet, How good of you to send me your book [In Mr. Knox’s Country], by Somerville and Ross] ... I am reading it slowly, because aloud to W. B. Yeats. He at the first mention of Major Yeates asked anxiously if it was spelt with a second e, and hearing it was, gave himself up to uninterrupted enjoyment. I love the "old Mrs. Aure" bits, there is so much of your Mother in them ... Yes, I think one ought to be grateful for the laughter-calling gift. Your book will help heavy hearts to put by their trouble for a while. I have felt rather guilty during the war because I can’t knit stockings ... and my sort of fighting is not wanted ...”.

discussing the terms of Lane’s will and of his unsigned codicil bequeathing certain pictures to the City of Dublin instead of to the London National Gallery, expressing her anxiety as sole trustee that effect should be given to his wish that these pictures should be "returned" to Dublin ("… the Manets, Renoirs, etc., etc.- the cream of the collection … Did he not show wonderful generosity, & a wonderful forgiveness?"); mentioning the importance to her of her visits to him in Chelsea ("… delightful society of artists and writers, people of all sorts, from the Crown Prince of Sweden to a little expert from Christie’s dropping his Hs").
