

Negotiating Detention: Prisons as Sites of Confrontation and Compromise in Protracted Conflicts

Summary

This research explores the implications of detention policies on security and human rights in protracted conflict, investigating how prisons function as often-overlooked sites of political confrontation, mobilization, and at times, compromise, with a focus on Northern Ireland, South Africa, and Israel-Palestine.

Output

- Conference presentation at the International Studies Association Annual Convention (2017);
- Conference at QUB scheduled for May 2018;
- anticipated journal article.

Primary Investigator

Dr Julie Norman

Institution

Queen's University Belfast

Funding Value

£10,000.00

Dates

1 June 2016 - 31 May 2018

Funder

British Academy,
Small Research Grant