WELCOME

Welcome to the School of History, Anthropology, Philosophy and Politics.

We are a vibrant interdisciplinary community bringing together over 80 scholars working on a wide range of issues including the study of peace and conflict transformation, terrorism and security, ethnomusicology, public history, ethics, gender, cultural and cognitive anthropology, political theory, European history and politics, and Irish, US, African and Chinese history.

Students have the opportunity to pursue taught or research degrees in disciplinary focused or interdisciplinary areas. The School has over 950 undergraduate, 190 postgraduate taught and 130 research students across our degree programmes.

The School offers a supportive student learning environment with a priority given to small group teaching. The aim throughout is on a rich learning experience with an emphasis on critical thinking, research skills, analysis, interpretation and personal development. Students are also encouraged to develop their writing and oral presentation, research skills, analysis and interpretation. Students are able to pursue many study abroad opportunities at universities in Europe, the US and further afield.

Students will be taught by world-leading experts in their areas of interest who bring their knowledge and passion for their areas of research into classroom discussions. With high quality teaching and opportunities for student placements and student-led research, our students acquire a wide range of core skills and conceptual and practical training that are valued by major employers, professional organisations and academic institutions.

Guided by our academic staff we encourage our students to engage with some of the major issues affecting society today. These include how we understand and commemorate our past; how the past is put to work in the public sphere; the impact of Brexit in Ireland and the UK; the relationship between gender and democracy; the applied ethics of children, the family, healthcare and the state; the politics of migration and borders; and the politics and security of the state and international system.

ANTHROPOLOGY

Anthropology is the study of human diversity around the world. In studying anthropology, you will learn how different societies live together and think about such topics as family, sex, religion, art, and economics and gain skills increasingly in demand in a globalized and automated world.

Through classroom modules, optional placements, performance ensembles and your own anthropological fieldwork, you will also gain valuable skills in critical thinking, cross-cultural understanding, researching, interviewing, writing and presenting

COURSE CONTENT

The BA in Anthropology is constructed around four innovative, engaged themes:

1. What Makes Us Human?

Modules may include: Being Human: Evolution, Culture and Society; World on the Move; How Society Works.

2. Conflict, Peacebuilding and Identity

Modules may include: Us & Them: Why We Have Ingroups and Outgroups; Why Are Humans Violent? Understanding Violence, Conflict, and Trauma; Migration, Mobilities and Borders.

3. Arts, Creativity and Music

Modules may include: Being Creative: Music, Media and the Arts; Radical Musics: Understanding Sounds of Defiance across Disciplines.

4. Morality, Religion and Cognition

Modules may include: Apocalypse!: The End of the World; In Gods We Trust: The New Science of Religion; Human Morality; Love, Hate, and Beyond.

Note: that this is not an exclusive list and these options are subject to staff availability.

WHY QUEEN'S?

Anthropology combines an understanding of cultural diversity through human behaviour and expression, with a hands-on method of study that focuses on lived experience. Queen's offers the only anthropology course in the UK that combines the study of expressivity (through art and music) with thematic strands on conflict, religion, cognition, and business anthropology.

Global Opportunities

As part of their dissertation study in years 2 and 3, students have carried out ethnographic field research around the world, including on orphanages in Kenya, AIDS in southern Africa, education in Ghana, dance in India, NGOs in Guatemala, music in China, marriage in Japan, backpacking in Europe, and whale-watching in Hawaii.

Students have the opportunity to use practice-based research skills during eight weeks of ethnographic fieldwork in areas of their specialisation, which can entail working with organisations around the globe.

World-Class Facilities

The Performance Room includes a variety of musical instruments from around the world, a collection that has grown since the 1970s when Ethnomusicology was first established as an International Centre at Queen's by the late Professor John Blacking. These instruments, together with the sprung performance room floor, facilitate music and dance ensembles, enabling our unit to remain one of the leading departments in Ethnomusicology.

Internationally Renowned Experts

Students can also work with world class institutions including; Senator George J. Mitchell Institute for Global Peace, Security and Justice; The Institute of Cognition and Culture; The Institute of Irish Studies; Two International Summer schools including the Irish Studies Summer School; and the Conflict Transformation and Social Justice Summer School.

Anthropology at Queen's has international renown in the following areas:

“The fieldwork and dissertation have been central to my experience as an Anthropology student. While I am sure it will stand me in good stead in my future search for employment, its central value was as a practice which revealed what Anthropology is really about; through fieldwork, the abstract and theoretical concepts which we had absorbed in two years previous study became immediate and concrete; the subject came alive. Observing and analysing patterns of human action and thought, and later attempting to relay any inferred information (in the form of a dissertation) was a stimulating and challenging process, which seemed to me to be of value in and of itself.”

ANTHROPOLOGY AND HISTORY

Anthropology is the study of human diversity around the world. In studying anthropology, you will learn how different societies live together and think about such topics as family, sex, religion, art, and economics and gain skills increasingly in demand in a globalized and automated world.

The programme is designed to provide students with training in History and Anthropology, two disciplines which, while discrete, are complementary and mutually enriching. The programme allows students to delve into each discipline's unique body of knowledge, subject matters, and research skills.

Studying anthropology at Queen's will allow you to examine some of the deepest and most pressing questions about human beings. Issues addressed in our modules include:

- Does globalisation mean the end of cultural difference?
- Can a post-conflict society heal?
- How do ritual traditions, musical performances, and art shape cultural identities?
- How do some people become willing to die for a group?

Through classroom modules, optional placements, and your own anthropological fieldwork, you will also gain valuable skills in critical thinking, cross-cultural understanding, researching, interviewing, writing and presenting.

History explains the modern world by tracking phenomena like gender, race, class, religion, the state, empire, or capitalism back through time. Our historians are able to reach back to the Roman empire, the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, the Reformation and the great modern revolutions across all of Europe, North America, Africa, and Asia, in order to account for our lives today. From their first year, we trust our students to make choices and range widely across all these histories to understand where we have come from. And from the beginning of your degree you will be taught in small groups by expert historians. Our range in time and space, our trust in you to explore and make good choices, and our small group teaching from the first year of the degree, mark us out among our peer universities.

Note: that this is not an exclusive list and these options are subject to staff availability.

HISTORY

Year 1

Modules at Level 1 offer a systematic introduction to the discipline of History, partly by sampling some of the many different approaches that historians take in studying the past, and partly by an exploration of some of the major questions of theory and method with which they are concerned.

Year 2

Modules at Level 2 are generally survey modules seeking to convey a sense of the principal events, trends and developments in a particular country or region over a fairly long time span.

Examples include:

- The making of contemporary Britain: 1914 to present
- Europe between the Wars, 1919-1939
- Life, Love and Death in England and Ireland, C.1350-1650
- Apocalypse! The end of the World
- The American South, 1619-1865

Year 3

Taught modules at Level 3 are more specialised, offering the opportunity to study a short period or a particular theme or problem in detail, working from documents as well as secondary sources.

Examples include:

- After Slavery: Race and Labour Society and Politics in Belfast, 1780-1914
- The Rise of Christianity
- The Peasants' Revolt 1381
- The Irish Revolution, 1817-1921

At level 3, students must write an anthropology dissertation and choose one anthropology module along with three history modules. Or if opting for the history dissertation with one history module they will also choose three Anthropology modules.

WHY QUEEN'S?

Internationally Renowned Experts

Anthropology at Queen's has international renown in the following areas: Ethnomusicology and performance; Conflict and borders; Religion; Cognition and culture; Migration and diasporas; Irish studies; Material culture and art; Human-animal relations; The cross-cultural study of emotions.

History at Queen's enjoys a concentration of excellent expertise in Ancient History, the medieval, early modern, and modern history of Britain, Ireland and continental Europe, the history of the American South from the seventeenth century, the history of twentieth-century Africa and China.

Global Opportunities

Undergraduate anthropology students, as part of their training, have carried out ethnographic field research around the world. Projects have focused on orphanages in Kenya; AIDS in southern Africa, education in Ghana; dance in India, NGOs in Guatemala, music in China, marriage in Japan, backpacking in Europe, and whale-watching in Hawaii.

In addition, through the different stages of the dissertation module (preparation and research design, fieldwork itself, and post-fieldwork writing-up), students develop a range of skills (organizational skills, interpersonal skills, information-handling skills, and project management skills) that prepare them for later employment. Many of our students work with NGOs and other organisations as part of their fieldwork.

Study Abroad

This joint programme also offers students opportunities to travel and study at universities in Europe and North America. Short-term (two weeks) and longer-term (up to one academic year) exchanges are on offer.

Industry Links

A growing number of Internship opportunities will match dissertation students with organisations and institutions relevant to their career paths by building on local and international staff networks and professional connections.

Professional Opportunities

As part of undergraduate training, students have the opportunity to use practice-based research skills during eight weeks of ethnographic fieldwork in areas of their specialisation, which can entail working with organisations around the globe.

Close Links with Employers

Several modules include links with local collaborative partners, which provide students with opportunities to network with experts in the field or to gain experience of particular industries prior to graduation.

Internships have also been developed to allow students the opportunity to carry out work experience in history-related fields.

Graduates from the History degree at Queen's are well regarded by many employers (local, national and international) and over half of all graduate jobs are now open to graduates of any discipline, including History.

Although many of our graduates are interested in pursuing careers in teaching, significant numbers develop careers in a wide range of other sectors. The following is a list of the major career sectors that have attracted our graduates in recent years:

- Accountancy
- Fast-stream Civil Service
- Management consultancy
- Museums, archives and libraries
- Performing arts
- Public relations
- Publishing and media
- Teaching
- Voluntary sector/charities

Further Study

Many others go onto further study, not only in History MAs, but also MSc Management, MSc Software Development, PGCE History, PCGE Primary, MA Legal Science, MA Legislative Studies and Practice, MSc Dating and Chronology, and MA International Relations.

Further study is also an option; information on Master's programmes and research topics are available from the School website.

HISTORY AND INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

The Joint Honours Programme in History and International Relations provides students with an intellectual training in disciplines that are complementary and mutually enriching. The programme enables students to appreciate how historical events shape modern issues and how such themes are to be understood and explained through insights into political analysis (e.g. political theory, political institutions, international relations). It offers students the opportunity to analyse country-based developments across the globe and pays specific attention to the histories and politics of Africa, Europe and America.

COURSE CONTENT

The Joint Honours History and International Relations degree comprises compulsory modules together with optional modules. Students will choose three modules from each subject totalling six modules for the year. The modules may include:

- Politics and Society in 20th-Century Ireland
- The American South 1865–1980
- The Expansion of Medieval Europe 1000–1300

Year 3

Taught modules at Level 3 are more specialised, offering the opportunity to study a short period or a particular theme or problem in detail, working from documents as well as secondary sources.

Examples include:

- The Second World War in Europe
- The Peasants' Revolt 1381
- The Long Sexual Revolution in Western Europe
- The Soviet Union, 1921 – 1991
- The Ancient City

Students can also do a dissertation in either History or International Relations and/or take a work experience module.

The dissertation can be based on an individually assigned research topic chosen in consultation with a supervisor.

Some modules, especially surveys, use lectures and tutorials; others are taught through seminars, in which students are expected to come prepared to fully engage in and sometimes lead group discussions. There is also increasing use of remote learning.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Year 1

Students are introduced to the study of politics, political ideology, comparative politics, the state-of-world politics, international history and contemporary Europe.

Year 2

In their second year, students focus on the political, economic and social transformations of the 20th century and beyond, and will be able to advance their conceptual understanding of the field of international relations and conflict by studying modules such as:

WHY QUEEN'S?

Alumni

Various serving politicians have studied in the School, including Ian Paisley Jr (MP), Green Party leader, Stephen Agnew, and ministers in the Northern Ireland Executive.

Global Opportunities

The History programme allows students opportunities to engage with industry partners, to carry out public-facing or industry-related work, and to study and travel abroad.

Students have the opportunity to travel and study at universities in Europe and North America. Short-term (two weeks) and longer-term (up to one academic year) exchanges are on offer.

The School also has links with Queen's University's Global Research Centre and The Senator George J. Mitchell Institute for Global Peace, Security and Justice. Many of the School's staff are Fellows in the Mitchell Institute, where they work in collaboration with experts in peace and conflict studies from other disciplines such as law, sociology, and the creative arts.

Industry Links

The School offers a range of employment placements where students can gain real world work experience which is invaluable in terms of employment after graduation.

Student placements are available in some of the high profile institutions on our doorstep. For example, in the Department of Justice, Equality Commission, Police Ombudsman Office, or BBC Northern Ireland.

Student Experience

Our uniquely supportive pastoral care/personal tutor system is equalled only by the academic guidance available. Our vibrant Politics Society (Polysoc) and History provides a welcome and stimulating environment for new students.

Year after year, our History students tell the NSS that they are more than 90% satisfied by their teaching.

Internationally Renowned Experts

The School of History, Anthropology, Philosophy and Politics at Queen's has 30 full-time academics at the cutting-edge of research and publication, making it the largest institutional centre for the study of these subjects in Ireland and one of the largest in the UK.

The School also boasts the following:

- Centre for Public History
- Institute of Cognition and Culture
- Institute of Irish Studies
- Two International Summer Schools (the Irish Studies Summer School; and the Conflict Transformation and Social Justice Summer School)

HISTORY AND POLITICS

This programme provides students with an intellectual training in the mutually enriching disciplines of History and Politics. A key premise of the programme is that understanding the present and anticipating the future requires the ability to study and interpret the past and to appreciate how the insights of political theory and the tools of historical inquiry combine to illuminate political developments, including those in the contemporary world. History is concerned with understanding the world around us by analysing how it has developed over time. Politics is concerned with promoting understanding of, and engagement with, Politics, its specific concepts, issues and vocabulary.

COURSE CONTENT

The Joint Honours History and Politics degree comprises compulsory modules together with optional modules. Students will choose three modules from each subject totalling six modules for the year.

Skills to Enhance Employability

Studying for a degree in History and Politics at Queen’s will assist you in developing the core skills and employment-related experiences that are valued by employers, professional organisations and academic institutions. Graduates from this degree at Queen’s are well regarded by employers and over half of all graduate jobs are now open to graduates of any discipline, including History and Politics.

Close Links with Employers

The School offers a range of employment placements where students can gain real-world work experience which is invaluable in terms of employment after graduation. Given that Belfast is a regional capital with devolved powers, we can offer students placements in the high profile political and related institutions on our doorstep – for example in the Department of Justice, Equality Commission, Police Ombudsman’s Office, or BBC Northern Ireland.

Further Study

For those wishing to pursue further study after their first degree, the School provides a range of MA programmes, each of which can be taken either full-time (one year) or part-time (two years).

There are also opportunities to do an MPhil or PhD by thesis; see the School website for information.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND CONFLICT

The programme in International Relations and Conflict provides students with an in-depth, interdisciplinary understanding of contemporary politics, international affairs and conflict situations in their political, historical, cultural, economic and legal dimensions. Dedicated modules introduce students to core concepts and debates in International Relations and the study of conflict, as well as to the particular European experience of regional integration. Students will acquire familiarity with the experiences of differing national politics and societies, facilitating the development of culturally sensitive cross-national comparisons.

Year 1

Students are introduced to the study of politics, political ideology, comparative politics, the state of world politics, international history and contemporary Europe.

Year 2

In their second year, students focus on the political, economic and social transformations of the 20th century and beyond, and will be able to advance their conceptual understanding of the field of international relations and conflict by studying modules such as:

- International Relations
- Security and Terrorism
- Deeply Divided Societies
- Politics and Policies of the EU
- International Organisations
- Peace and Conflict Studies
- Identity Politics in Diverse Societies

Year 3

In the final year, students can select more specific areas and specialist-based modules on, for example, the Middle East, US Foreign Policy, migration, the Far Right, Political Extremism, Politics of the Global Economy, and modules on Identity Politics, International Ethics, War and Visual Culture, Conflict and Conflict Resolution.

Dissertations: in their final year, students can write a dissertation based on a research topic of their choice and under one-to-one supervision by an academic with specialist knowledge in the chosen field.

Note: this is not an exclusive list and these options are subject to staff availability.

WHY QUEEN'S?

Internationally Renowned Experts

- Professor Beverley Milton-Edwards has advised various governments in her role as an expert on the Middle East, and is currently a Visiting Fellow at the Brookings Institution.
- Professor David Phinnemore is an expert on EU Treaty reform and EU enlargement, which led to his secondment as an advisor to the UK's Foreign and Commonwealth Office.
- Professor John Garry is an internationally recognised expert in the areas of citizens' political attitudes and voting behaviour. His research has informed governments both in Belfast and Dublin on offering ordinary citizens the chance to have greater input on policymaking.

Student Experience

Our vibrant Politics Society (Polysoc) provides a welcome and stimulating environment for new students.

PHILOSOPHY

During your degree, you will learn about cutting-edge debates in core areas of philosophy such as ethics, metaphysics, theory of knowledge and political philosophy, as well as studying some of the key thinkers in the history of philosophy, such as Plato, Aristotle, Descartes, Hume, Mill and Marx. You will also develop your skills in reasoning and argumentation by studying formal logic and critical thinking.

COURSE CONTENT

The degree programme does not presuppose any prior training in Philosophy and can profitably be taken by those who have studied the subject at school – as well as those who have not.

Year 1

Students choose six modules from a range of introductory modules including the following:

- Introductory Logic
- Perspectives on Politics
- Philosophy and Human Nature
- Philosophy and the Good Life

Year 2

Students choose six modules that explore the wide range of major debates and inquiry in Philosophy, exploring questions that range from how to understand the mind, to how 'reality' might be understood, to key political theories about how we live as a society. Examples include:

- History of Philosophy
- Knowledge and Reality
- Mind and Language
- Modern Political Thought
- Moral Theories
- Philosophy of Science

Year 3

In the final year, students focus on particular areas of specialisation that build on their studies in years 1 and 2. Students will write a dissertation (double-weighted) and choose four modules. Examples of options include:

- Applied Ethics
- Contemporary Critical Theory
- Philosophical Theology
- Philosophy for Children
- Issues in the Philosophy of Science
- Topics in Epistemology
- Dissertation

Note: this is not an exclusive list and these options are subject to staff availability.

WHY QUEEN'S?

Global Opportunities

Students have the opportunity to spend part of the course studying in other European universities through our Erasmus programme, and also in the USA.

Internationally Renowned Experts

Queen's Philosophy department has particular strengths in analytic philosophy. Our Faculty work on cutting-edge topics in applied ethics and political philosophy. We have an international reputation for our research in the philosophy of religion, epistemology, and the philosophy of science.

POLITICS

The academic study of politics is concerned with the sources of conflict, co-operation, power and decision-making within and between societies, how differences are expressed through ideology and organisation, and how, if at all, disagreements and problems are resolved.

You will develop an in-depth understanding of politics, political theory, how states are governed, and the place of citizens in politics.

Politics is a very dynamic subject area, and Queen's Politics and International Relations students study such topical issues as environmental politics, Brexit, democratic reforms (such as Citizens' Assemblies and other democratic innovations), migration, citizenship, conflict, and security.

COURSE CONTENT

The degree programme does not presuppose any prior training in politics and can profitably be taken by those who have studied the subject at school – as well as those who have not.

Year 1

You will choose six modules from a range of introductory modules, including the following:

- Comparative Politics
- Contemporary Europe
- Issues in Contemporary Politics
- Perspectives on Politics
- World Politics

Year 2

You will take two modules that will provide you with a solid grounding in political theory (Modern Political Thought) and research methods (Studying Politics), along with four optional modules, including:

- American Politics
- British Politics in Crisis?
- Irish Politics
- International Organisations
- Politics and Policies of the European Union
- Security and Terrorism
- International Relations
- The Politics of Deeply Divided Societies
- Apocalypse! The End of the World
- The Northern Ireland Conflict and paths to Peace
- Identity Politics in Diverse Societies
- Theory Counts

Year 3

You have a range of options in year 3 including incorporating a placement, internship or dissertation.

Some of the modules available are:

- Arms Control
- Asylum and Migration in Global Politics
- Contemporary Political Philosophy
- Global Political Economy of Energy
- Politics of the Global Economy
- European Cultural Identities
- National and Ethnic Minorities in European Politics
- Northern Ireland: A Case Study

POLITICS, PHILOSOPHY AND ECONOMICS

The Politics, Philosophy and Economics (PPE) degree is based on the view that, to understand public phenomena, one must approach them from several disciplinary directions. This degree illuminates how these three areas complement one another:

- Politics acquaints students with the institutions and processes that produce decisions governing our lives
- Philosophy develops analytical rigour, the ability to reason logically, critically and ethically
- Economics helps in understanding government policy and the choices facing businesses, governments and society

COURSE CONTENT

In order to ensure that students studying on the PPE degree have sufficient grounding in all three subjects, they have a prescribed list of four modules at both Levels 1 and 2 (with two optional modules each year). At level 3, students have greater flexibility in terms of their module choices, having the option to substitute either a dissertation or internship in place of some of their modules.

Level 1

Students take:

- Three Economics modules
- One Politics module
- One Philosophy module

And one additional module choice.

Level 2

Students take three core interdisciplinary modules designed specifically for PPE students to show how politics, philosophy, and economics are deeply intertwined:

- Democracy, Ethics and Economics
- Politics and Economics of the Devolved UK
- Macroeconomic Policy and Performance

And

- Moral Theories
- Or
- History of Philosophy

And two optional modules from this list:

- Data Analysis and Optimisation
- American Politics
- British Politics in Crisis?
- Studying Politics

- Identity Politics and Diverse Societies
- Managerial Economics
- International Relations
- Modern Political Thought
- Introduction to the Philosophy of Science
- Security and Terrorism
- Irish Politics
- Knowledge and Reality
- Mind and Language

Level 3

In their final year, students can specialise more, building on their studies in years 1 and 2. Options include six taught modules, or incorporating modules with a placement, an internship or dissertation.

Modules

The module choices available to PPE students cover a wide range of topics in each of the three subjects. In Economics, modules cover issues such as labour economics, public economics, and economic history. In Philosophy, topics include Philosophical Theology, Applied Ethics and Contemporary Political Philosophy. Politics options include Earth, Energy, Ethics and Economy Politics of the Global Economy, Challenges to Contemporary Party Politics, Global Political Economy of Energy, Far Right in Western Europe and North America and Asylum and Migration in Global Politics.

Note: that this is not an exclusive list and these options are subject to staff availability.

Dissertation: in their final year, students can opt to write a dissertation based on a research topic of their choice and under

WHY QUEEN'S?

Studying PPE at Queen's has several unique advantages:

- Studying in Belfast, a regional political and economic capital city, allows for one to interact directly with key decision makers in the area
- Situated on the island of Ireland, the PPE degree at Queen's offers a unique international setting
- Studying Politics, Philosophy, and Economics in a divided society allows one to explore how these subjects work to shape conflict
- Small class sizes promote the building of close friendships and networks

Although the PPE degree only began at Queen's in 2009, it has already been successful in placing graduates in top positions in business and government. This includes one currently serving minister in the Northern Ireland Executive.

Placement

Students have the opportunity in the final year to undertake a part-time placement within a local organisation to gain direct experience of policy-making and political decision-making.

Global Opportunities

Study Abroad: students have study opportunities in other European universities through our Erasmus programme, and also in the USA and Canada.

Our vibrant PPE Society provides a welcome and stimulating environment for new students. We have students from around the UK, Ireland, Europe and the wider world, ensuring a rich mix of students with different experiences and backgrounds.

Research Methods

Students will develop core skills in analytical research methods necessary for analysing political and economic data.

CAREERS/FURTHER STUDY

A PPE degree provides a stimulating programme of study and intellectual training useful in many walks of life and future career paths. Graduates are equipped with the necessary attributes for graduate employment or postgraduate education and training, and are able to make a difference in whatever future career they choose. PPE graduates from Queen's have moved into areas such as further postgraduate study (internationally and in Britain and Ireland), teacher training, journalism, broadcasting, banking, consultancy, the civil service, and politics. Recent graduates have gone on to work for employers such as the Bank of England, major companies like PriceWaterhouseCoopers, and major political parties (including an MLA at Stormont).

Further Study

For those wishing to pursue further study after their first degree, the School provides a range of MA programmes. There are also opportunities to do an MA in Politics and an MPhil or PhD by thesis; see the School website for information.

“The School is of not too large a size as to be impersonal, and therefore the relationships between the students and with the staff were strong and highly inclusive. The relatively small intake of the PPE programme meant that across all three years there were plenty of opportunities to interact with the other students, and the PPE society always had great socials as well as academic events. Even though I'm now in London I return to Belfast quite often to catch up with friends now working in Northern Ireland or studying at Queen's.”
