

Apply to join the School of Law's Digital Investigation Lab

Join a cutting-edge open source investigation opportunity

WHAT?

Meeting on Wednesday afternoons, the Digital investigation Lab is partnering with Airwars and Global Legal Action Network to document and verify evidence of possible human rights abuses and war crimes. One of the projects that you will get to work on is using open source information to geolocate air strikes on the civilian population in Syria.

No prior experience is needed - you will receive training from world-leading experts in open source investigations, such as the award-winning organisation Bellingcat.

Other benefits include:

- Enhanced understanding of International Humanitarian Law, International Criminal Law, and International Human Rights Law;
- Applied legal research skills;
- Report-writing and legal analysis as to the significance of the evidence gathered for submission to official bodies such as UN mechanisms or courts;
- CV enhancement with online investigations skills, which will be advantageous in many Public International Law arenas going forward;
- Experience in applying the law to evidence.

WHO?

The Digital investigation Lab is recruiting creative and curious level 3 LLB/senior status and postgraduate law students with an eye for detail and willingness to learn new skills.

YOUR TASK

1. Find where this image was taken and give us the coordinates
2. Work out when this image was taken
3. Tell us how you went about finding the date and location of this image
4. Explain why you want to be involved in the Lab.
5. Email answers to lmillar20@qub.ac.uk and l.moffet@qub.ac.uk.

APPLY BY 5PM ON 6 OCTOBER 2025!

