

Doctorate in Clinical Psychology: Clinical Placements

Dr David McCormack

Clinical Director

Clinical Placements

- Under the close supervision of a qualified Clinical Psychologist trainees get to work clinically with children, adults, and older adults.
- Variety of presenting problems seen (e.g., anxiety, depression, post-traumatic stress, psychosis, persistent physical symptoms, brain injury, and intellectual disability).
- Clinical work includes carrying out thorough assessments and when indicated treatment - reduce distress, and support those seen in clinic to better manage and cope and have an improved quality of life.

Clinical Placements

- Across the three years of training:
 - 5 Placements
 - First year has an extended clinical placement
 - The remaining 4 clinical placements are approx. 6 months in duration
 - In placement typically for three days a week during term time and rising to four days during the summer months

Linking theory and practice

- Apply the teaching at Queen's in clinical work on placement. Theory and research findings should inform clinical practice.
- Clinical science in practice – research supported psychological interventions. Evaluate treatment.
- Trainees bring their clinical experience and observations back into the classroom which can complement teaching / enhance learning.
- Reflective scientist-practitioners.
