

MSc Psychological Sciences (Conversion)

The MSc Psychological Sciences (Conversion) is an intensive one year Master's course with accreditation from the British Psychological Society, enabling you to pursue a career in this area even if your background is in another discipline.

This new conversion course will appeal to you if you do not already have a psychology degree. It is approved and accredited by the British Psychological Society, which means you'll have the essential knowledge to undertake professional training. If you're from overseas, this is your passport to practise in the UK.

The degree confers eligibility for the Graduate Basis for Chartered Membership (GBC) of the British Psychological Society and many graduates will go on to complete training in one of the 7 registered professions of psychology as well as undertaking many other jobs, (management, HR, analysts) where a psychology degree is of benefit

The closing date for applications is Wednesday 17th May at 4pm. All applications will be processed after the closing date. Decisions and offers will be communicated to applicants before the end of June 2017.

The Graduate School at QUB

The Graduate School connects students across all disciplines to one another, and to mentors, leaders, and employers within the university and beyond supporting postgraduates to become 'what's next thinkers', training you to be thinkers, communicators, innovators and leaders who are future ready. Based in the beautifully restored and remodelled Victorian Lynn library, this fully-accessible space has modern, hi-tech meeting and group study rooms, a silent study area and social spaces creating a vibrant hub for intellectual exchange and collaboration.

For anyone considering Psychology at Queen's, I would encourage you wholeheartedly to go for it! The staff, facilities and resources available won't disappoint. The biggest draw for me was the impressive staff. Most professors work on their own research while also teaching and I enjoyed the idea of being taught by world leaders that are active within the field of psychology
