– Institutional champion

Aurora is an initiative to address the under-representation of women in leadership positions in the HE sector.

7,400
participants

(by July 2020)

“The Aurora programme has inspired me to think of myself as a leader. It has shown me that I can be a unique leader; that I can remain authentic to myselfEven before I have a formal leadership position, I can do leadership acts now.”

Aurora participant 2017/18

>1200 role models

Longitudinal study – Year 2 findings

17% of Aurora respondents were promoted compared with 8% of the respondents in the comparison group

AURORANS twice as likely to get promoted!

ONWARDS & UPWARDS? TRACKING WOMEN'S CAREERS IN HIGHER EDUCATION

• AdvanceHE

10 Conclusions

Message 1 – Above and beyond

- 86% of women - their job requires them to have influence over others but no authority.
- An appetite for leadership exists
- Risk that asking women to go ‘above and beyond’ leads to loss of recognition.

Message 2 – We do have the skills

- Many women are confident that they possess the relevant leadership skills
- More to be done to support women to implement their skills in a political workplace,
- Which in turn could help women overcome structural inhibitors.

Message 3 – The workplace

- Promotion and development opportunities believed to be opaque and poorly run.
- Real and perceived barriers are prevalent
- We need to do more to communicate a transparent, fair, process for career advancement.

10 Conclusions

Message 4 – Keep giving us your support

- There are supportive managers, leaders and mentors working in higher education
- Team-work and co-operation are often encouraged.
- These practices help institutions navigate experienced and perceived negative workplace practices.

Message 5 – Diverse motives for career progression

- Being an expert in one's domain
- To be of service to the organisation
- A desire for job security ranked higher than seeking out top leadership positions.

10 Conclusions

Message 6 – Flexible flexibility

- Some women believe flexible working is taken as a sign that they are not serious about their career.
- Working non-traditional hours does not indicate someone is less committed
- Unlocks potential for those with commitments outside traditional 9-5 hours

Message 7 – More career management, please

- Women do seek out opportunities to build their skills, increase their visibility and maintain their networks.
- Institutions can do more to encourage women to go beyond their ‘norm’
- Really get under the skin of where they want their career to go, and to support them to get there.

10 Conclusions

Message 8– The divide

- Women in professional services are generally more positive than their academic colleagues about workplace culture and practices.
- They have a more positive sense that they are better prepared for leadership roles and report greater confidence in their knowledge of how their organisation runs.

Message 9 – what's in ethnicity?

- BAME respondents reported less positive views of the culture of their workplace.
- Ambitious, highly work-centered and focused on skills development.
- There is huge potential here to nurture this ambition

Message 10 – Aurora is clearly helping

- ✓ Aurora gives women more confidence
- ✓ They report that their leadership skillsets have increased.
- ✓ On the whole, Aurorans seek out and 'do' more leadership.
