

Centre for Irish Business and Economic Performance,
Queen's Management School; the Chief Executives' Club at Queen's; and Nevin Economic Research Institute

Tuesday 26 April, 6-8pm
Whitla Hall, Queen's University Belfast

'The Economic Implications of Brexit in Northern Ireland'

Now that the British government has set a referendum date on Britain's membership in the European Union, the time is nigh for real debate around the implications a Brexit may have for Northern Ireland. The 'leave' camp argue that a British withdrawal would save the taxpayer billions and free Britain from an economic burden. The 'remain' campaign argue that exit would lead to deep economic uncertainty and cost thousands, perhaps millions, of jobs. So what really are the likely impacts?

Following on from a recent report on the impact of Brexit for the Republic of Ireland by the Economic and Social Research Institute, Dr Edgar Morgenroth will look at the possible implications for Northern Ireland. This talk will be followed by a panel discussion and Q&A chaired by John Campbell, BBC Northern Ireland's Economics and Business Editor.

There is no charge to attend this lecture, though early registration is advised.

Presenter

Dr Edgar Morgenroth
Economic and Social Research Institute

Panel Discussion Chair

John Campbell, BBC Northern Ireland Economics and Business Editor

Panel Members

Dr Esmond Birnie, Chief Economist, PwC

Angela McGowan, Chief Economist, Danske Bank

Paul MacFlynn, Economist, Nevin Economic Research Institute

The talks will begin at 6pm sharp and refreshments will be served after the event.

Please confirm your attendance with Brenda Carabine brenda.carabine@qub.ac.uk Tel: 028 9097 1153